Introduction

History of the Project

The County Council of the region Suceava acknowledges that tourism plays an important role in the development of the region. For this reason, the council commissioned a tourism strategy. A summary was presented in May 2009 (see attachment 1). For the further development and completion of the tourism strategy, the county council asked the GTZ to partner this project. A memorandum of understanding between the GTZ and the Suceava County Council has been set up which specifies the roles and duties of each partner (see attachment 2).

According to this, the GTZ tourism experts were assigned the following tasks in cooperation with the tourism team of the council:

- Further development and completion of existing SWOT analysis
- Tour operator interviews in Germany – perception of the destination Bucovina
- Visitor questioning in Bucovina tourists/consumer behavior on the domestic market Romania
- Benchmarking of the destination Bucovina
- Price benchmarking
- International tourism trends
- Human resource development in tourism / tourism school.

The project was due to take place from May to November 2009. The following meetings were arranged:

- Working group meeting in Suceava on May 25, 2009
  Participants were the Tourism Team of the county and the GTZ team

- Tourism Strategy Workshop 1 in Suceava on June 25, 2009
  Participants were the working group and representatives of the tourism administration, of the private tourism sector, and tourism associations

- Tourism Strategy Workshop 2 in Campulung Moldovenesc on October 04. 2009

- Working Group meeting in Suceava on October 22, 2009
  Working group county / GTZ

- Presentation of updated Tourism Strategy Frame and Action Plan
  In Suceava on November 4/5, 2009

Why Tourism Strategy

It is important for a tourism destination to develop a written, binding tourism strategy in order to

- get a common understanding of tourism, and of rules and procedures on the sector,
- create a joint platform for the further development of tourism in the Bucovina,
• make clear who the stakeholders are and what their responsibilities are,
• supply a guideline for tourism planning at community, municipality and county level as well as for general planning of issues impacting on tourism,
• create awareness for tourism treasures and the importance of their preservation and rehabilitation,
• supply tools and checklists for the management of tourism on all levels,
• ensure a focus on further developing tourism in the Bucovina in order to get most out of the investment of restricted resources,
• pave the way for inter-regional cooperation, and
• create a favourable environment for the acquisition of investments and fund raising.

Structure of the Tourism Strategy Paper

As the tourist experience and revenue generation happen at the local level, a bottom-up approach is needed for the development of the tourism strategy. In other words, the local level needs to be taken as the basis of the development, so as to include local government, local businesses and other stakeholders. There are, however, very varied levels of understanding and knowledge of tourism and its workings.

Part one therefore creates in a more theoretical way a common understanding of tourism and of its potential for the region, of basic rules and procedures on managing tourism, as well as of success factors and tools to apply. In order to use restricted resources best and to ensure an efficient development process, this common understanding of tourism is a vital prerequisite for attaining the support of all stakeholders.

In part two, the frame for the update and further development of the Bucovina tourism strategy will be set also in a more theoretical way. First the strategy development process with external and internal influences will be explained. Secondly the tourism strategy components such as destinations within the Bucovina, or types of tourism will be identified and defined. The outcome will be benchmark criteria for the evaluation of the current status in the Bucovina out of which necessary measures will be derived.

In part three, taking into consideration the framework developed in parts one and two, recommendations regarding the further development of the existing Bucovina tourism strategy are elaborated. The status quo of the tourism sector 2008/09 is described, leading to the vision statement outlining where Bucovina as a tourism destination wants to be 2013. Then, the tasks to be addressed in order to reach those 2013 goals are extrapolated, taking into consideration internal and external influences. The outcome will lead to the definition of necessary measures on the identified fields of action.

Finally, part four contains the action plan for the implementation of the Bucovina tourism strategy. Current and planned projects can be listed and complemented by recommended future projects for each of the different fields of activity.

Within the framework of the project, H&A was able to develop structures and processes for the SWOT analyses, need assessments, project definitions as well as schemes which give an overview of current, planned and future projects. Furthermore, we give examples of how to use these tools and structures. This leads to the proposal of a project management system, submitted in chapter 10.
It was not part of the project to develop all aspects of a tourism strategy for the Bucovina or give examples for the further development of these. For reasons of time constraint, H&A was forced to restrict the work to developing structures and formats for the further use by the partners of the project. Market research studies, SWOT analyses, need assessments, briefings, etc. are not integrated into the strategy paper but are attached. In this way, these documents can be used separately without having to consult the full strategy paper. The strategy paper presented here can thus be used as a guideline for updating, completion and expansion of the tourism strategy for the Bucovina.

Acknowledgements

The political will of the president of the county Suceava and his team to further develop the tourism sector as a key business sector of the county and the already existing tourism strategy created the basis for cooperation between Suceava county and GTZ. In close cooperation of the tourism division of Suceava with Claudiu Bradat, Christina Architei, Laura Ursu, Marilena Leonte, Catalina Velniuc and the GTZ experts with Dr. Carmen Chasovschi, Oana Müller, and Gerd Hesselmann the following concept was elaborated.

An important role was played by the participants at the workshops organized by County Council: member and delegates of Bucovina Tourism Association, Sucevita Tourism Association, Vama Tourism Association, ANTREC, Salvamont Dorna, “Ștefan cel Mare” University, Museum of Bucovinian Traditions, Ethnografic Museum from Suceava, Ciocanesti City Hall, Calimani Nature Park, Chamber of Commerce and Industry and many others. They understood that a sustainable development of tourism in Bucovina is possible only through a joint effort.

We want to thank the county and the tourism team for their support and excellent cooperation as well as all participants at our two workshops for their contributions.

They paved the ground for the elaboration of the presented frame for a permanent updating and further development of the Bucovina tourism strategy as well as for creating a common understanding of the requirements of the tourism sector and the actions needed in order to achieve a sustainable tourism development.
Part 1 (Theoretical Background)
Creation of a Common Understanding of the Basis for the Bucovina Tourism Strategy

1. Background and Rationale

1.1. Definitions

A working definition of travel and tourism is given by the World Tourism Association (UNWTO 1992):

Tourism comprises the activities of persons travelling to and staying in places outside their usual environment for not more than one consecutive year for leisure, business and other purposes.

In general, tourism covers all traveling from A to B except for the daily traveling to work. B is situated outside the usual environment of the traveler.

Within the frame of the broad tourism definition above, some main reasons for traveling can be identified as shown in figure 2.
Market segmentation becomes necessary because people travel for different reasons. Each segment has different marketing requirements and specific characteristics. This is also the case concerning information as part of the tourism product of each market segment as well as information required and communication channels used to promote the tourism offer and to address target groups in the respective market segments.

1.2. Importance of the Tourism Sector

Worldwide, tourism is seen as an important sector in the development of an economy. Without any doubt, a growing tourism industry has an important positive impact on the economy and the society of a country.

An attractive tourism product which meets the expectations of visitors does not only benefit these visitors but also the local population by means of increased employment, incomes and quality of life. Besides the population, the state is another beneficiary of a growing tourism industry. Tourism creates jobs across all sectors of the economy, increasing the gross domestic product, increasing tax revenues and foreign currency imports. The third beneficiary is the tourism industry as such, i.e. companies creating and offering tourism products and services. They will grow, achieve higher revenues, increase incomes and employment, etc., so they will increase the value of the industry as a whole. On a local and national level, tourism offers many opportunities especially for small and medium size enterprises (SMEs).

There are different classes of impacts of tourism. Besides economic impacts, tourism has ecological and social impacts, too, for example. The impact can be seen as the sum of direct impacts and indirect or induced impacts (see figure 3), but minus the revenue that goes into imported goods. This is referred to as leakage. How much higher the total impact is than the original amount of money spent by the tourist is called the tourism multiplier.

But the positive impact of a flourishing tourism industry is not limited to the sectors that are directly connected with tourism such as hotels, restaurants, transport, or tourism services. Because of the ripple effect, the development of the core sectors of the tourism industry will lead to a series of economic reactions in other sectors as shown in figure 4 and help boost the number of SMEs.

Side sectors linked quite closely to the tourism industry, for example the textile industry, medical services industry, transport equipment, wholesale and retail industry, printing industry, information and communication technology, agriculture and so on, benefit to a high degree from tourism through the ripple effect. In addition, studies show that nearly all sectors in the entire economy benefit to some degree from tourism, even the local chemical and pharmaceutical industry, financial services industry, construction industry etc.

Nearly all of the revenues generated through tourism originate in the private sector, only a small margin comes from the public sector (see figure 5). For policy, this means that if government is serious about its support for tourism as an economic force in its country, it must ensure favourable framework conditions especially for the private sector, where the bulk of tourism revenues are generated.

As we have seen, tourism sector growth has a positive influence not only on the sector itself but also on the development of related industrial and service sectors, employment and the general economic situation in the provinces and of the country.
Tourism is a business sector and as such it is part of a market economy. This means that the owners of private companies bear the business risk.

Besides the described economic aspects of tourism, one has to be aware of the social aspects of tourism activities. Tourism can

- accelerate the convergence between different countries and different income groups
- contribute to globalisation and the benefits of more international contacts and exchanges
- build bridges of good will, understanding and peace
- provide an important educational tool
- encourage community involvement and stimulate artistic expression
The tourism sector generates revenues, which lead to tax income, contributes to the GDP and international visitors are part of the export volume of a destination. It is therefore in the interest of the state to create favourable framework conditions for a sustainable tourism development and thus for the realisation of the benefits through tourism.

Investments in tourism infrastructure and in tourism promotion by the state have to be seen as investments in future revenues and sustainable future contributions to the state budget.

1.3. Structures of the Tourism Industry

The tourism business takes place between the natural tourist resources and attractions on one side and the customer on the other (see figure 7). In between, there are the different levels of the value chain in the tourism industry. Whereas customers, potential visitors, travel agencies and tour operators belong to the source market, incoming agents, providers, facilities for tourism activities, and of course the natural tourist attractions belong to the destination. Between the source markets and the destination, we have the means of transportation such as airplane, train, coach/bus, car or ship.

!Tourism Sector Value Chain

In the source markets, destinations are in competition with each other. This manifests itself in the different kinds of marketing, use of media to promote destinations and above all in the brochures of tour operators which present the tourism offer of many destinations. To achieve a strong competitive position of the destination Bucovina, all stakeholders from the public and the private sector have to pool their resources, coordinate their activities and cooperate in marketing the destination.

Destinations and tourism offers, which are well known, attractive and which have a unique sales proposition (USP), generate demand by potential visitors. This is strengthened by fruitful cooperation between tour operators and travel agencies, because they both want to satisfy the demand in their market created by the destination’s marketing activities.
Even though each level of the tourism industry value chain has the means to communicate directly via internet with potential visitors in source markets, there are many reasons why it makes sense to not only focus on the web but also use the (more complex and expensive) distribution channel tour operator and travel agency. These professional intermediaries are trusted by travellers and are closer to their home, speaking their language and knowing their culture. The use of intermediaries is especially useful when, as in the case of Bucovina, the destination is not well known to the public in the source market.

1.4. SMEs – the Backbone of the Tourism Sector

Surprisingly, most of the businesses in all sectors of the tourism industry in Romania – achieving over 90% of revenues – are run at the local level and are classified as small and medium sized enterprises (SMEs). This obviously means that SMEs are the backbone of the tourism industry and need to be focussed on for effective and sustainable development within the national and above all within the regional tourism industry.

Responsibilities of Administration on all Levels Regarding SMEs

How do the national government on the one side and regional / local governments on the other side support SMEs in order to maximise their contributions to the development of the tourism sector and the economic benefits of tourism to the economy?

Responsibilities of the public sector towards SMEs are, above all, to support

- favourable legal frameworks conditions
- favourable economic and fiscal conditions, e.g. financial support for investments in the tourism industry,
- improved tourism infrastructure as a basis for the private sector tourism businesses,
- guidelines for business development such as a tourism strategy for the Bucovina, as well as for the tourism destinations around the county,
- facilities for sector specific training and education,
- the supply of tourism information (e.g. sign posting), and
- the promotion of the destination Bucovina and its tourist attractions.

Responsibilities of private Sector tourism Institutions regarding SMEs

There are mainly two responsibilities of tourism associations regarding SMEs: To render needed services and to take care of favourable framework conditions. However, looking at the institutional landscape in Romania on the national as well as on the county/regional level, the question is who can take over the following responsibilities:

1. To provide services to tourism associations representing tourism subsectors, tourism regions, types of tourism or transport and/or direct to single SMEs.
2. To advocate in favour of the SMEs of the tourism sector in order to increase the public sector’s acknowledgement of its responsibility as stipulated above and to take respective action.

1.5. Issues for the Bucovina Tourism Strategy

These issues are contained in the SWOT analysis in 8.7 “Summary Outcome SWOT Analyses. The SWOT analyses are the basis for the identification and definition of needs.
2. Destinations in the Bucovina Seen as Tourism Cluster

Over the last decades, tourism has demonstrated that it is capable of creating wealth and economic development for a nation and employment and increased quality of life for the population. The only way to achieve this is by being competitive. Competitiveness is defined as the ability of a destination to compete successfully against its main rivals on the targeted source markets. This means a tourism destination must offer the market better value than its competitors for the same effort on the part of tourists, or the same value for less effort.

2.1. Tourism Cluster Approach

Evidence has shown that, as in other industry sectors, tourist experiences normally take place within relatively small geographical boundaries. These areas are called clusters. They include groupings of tourism resources and attractions, infrastructure, equipment, service providers, and other supporting sectors and administrative bodies whose integrated and coordinated activities contribute to providing customers with the experience they expect from the destinations they choose to visit.

2.2. Competitiveness is the Key

Competitiveness is the basis for any kind of economic, social and environmental sustainability. This must be understood and accepted before an effective framework of public-private-tourism cooperation can be established. In this context, regional tourism associations as public-private-partnership units at the county or regional level play a decisive role in achieving sustainable tourism development.

Competitiveness within the tourism destination is achieved at the local level through permanent innovation and improvements. It is, however, not enough to focus on the respective destinations but also to acknowledge that other general conditions prevailing in a country can stimulate or destroy the competitiveness of tourism clusters. The framework conditions created by national institutions for example play an important role in enabling competitiveness.

2.2.1. Value for Effort of a Tourism Experience

In the end, everything depends on the value for effort that destinations offer to their source markets. Effort in this context is to a certain degree the costs of the trip that the tourist must cover, but also other deterring factors or inconveniences the traveller must overcome or accept. Tourists choose destinations if they believe they provide good value for little effort. Figure 8 shows the components which create the value for effort of a tourism experience.

!Value for Effort Formula of a "Tourism Experience"

Figure 9. The Value for Effort Formula of a "Tourism Experience"

The product components which create the value can be seen in Figure 15 under 2.3.2 Product policy.

2.2.2. Influencing Factors of Competitiveness

Tourism development involves the intervention of many different stakeholders – from both public and private sectors – in each destination. Although essentially a private sector activity, tourism requires government support to be sustainable. PPP should tend to focus on four main areas which lead to improved competitiveness:

- improving a destination's attractiveness,
- organizing professional and consistent marketing,
- maximizing productivity and service standards, and
- assuring sound management within the tourism system.

How the attractiveness of a tourism cluster can be improved is shown in figure 10. It requires a close cooperation between stakeholders on the public sector as well as on the private sector in order to achieve increased values and reduced efforts of visiting the destination.
Marketing also requires close cooperation between stakeholders from both public and private sectors. The single fields of cooperation and the targeted results are shown in figure 11. Basically this cooperation should lead to the highest marketing efficiency possible with a given, often tight budget. One way to do this is to focus tourism activities, on types of tourism with a good potential in the destination as well as to focus on source markets with the biggest guest potential for important types of tourism in the destination.
How the productivity of a tourism cluster can be improved is shown in figure 12. The issue is to protect, improve and use tourism assets and to improve the quality and efficiency of human resources in order to achieve a higher return on investments via higher occupancy and productivity levels.

!Improving the Productivity of the Tourism Cluster

However without a sound management within the tourism system the other efforts will fail. Looking at the general understanding that tourism is

- public sector led,
- private sector driven,
- community based, and
- employment sensitive,

it becomes obvious that management responsibility of the tourism sector lies in the hands of public and private sector institutions. This requires respective tourism institutions and their close cooperation. Regional tourism associations (APTs) such as the Bucovina Tourism Association are the medium for achieving successful PPPs in a destination and thus setting the scene for sustainable tourism development in economic, social and environmental terms.
2.3. Success Factor Marketing

To realize the benefits of tourism and the impacts on other business sectors, the identification, participation, contribution, cooperation, and support of all stakeholders including the local population is necessary. To achieve this, many obstacles have to be removed for e.g.

- No interest, controversial interests, egoism of single persons, prejudices, mistrust
- Lack of information, different level of information and knowledge
- Lack of qualification, poor contributions to tourism products

This shows, that marketing begins at home and that internal marketing is a prerequisite to remove potential obstacles. We therefore recommend to establish a single field of activity for "Internal Marketing" (see chapter 4).

2.3.1. Internal Marketing

As a first step, awareness of the impact of tourism and how each part of a society can contribute to a sustainable development has to be created. All stakeholders including the local population must know their opportunities and their responsibilities.

As a next step, the identification, participation and contribution of all stakeholders has to be ensured. The third step has to be the coordination of all suppliers and contributors to the overall tourism product, though they are in competition on their individual level of the tourism value chain.
In order to maintain a sustainable commitment and support, transparency regarding the ongoing activities and the achieved results has to be established.

And as the weakest component of the overall tourism product determines the overall quality of a tourism offer, the willingness for further development and training of stakeholders is requested.

2.3.2. External Marketing

The marketing mix policies product, price, communication, and distribution policy can be summarized under this success factor of a tourism destination. Marketing means to place the requirements of clients/visitors in the centre of strategy developments. The behaviour and the requirements of potential clients determine the marketing policies. It is therefore imperative to get a profound knowledge about source markets and selected target groups.

Society changes continuously, and trends – whether economic, social or lifestyle – subsequently impact on tourism. It is important for the tourism sector to assess these changes at an early stage. Existing policies regarding products and services, marketing and investments all demand appropriate adjustments or adaptations as per changes in market preferences and behaviour.

2.3.3. Market Intelligence / Fact Finding

Knowledge management is the most important element in value creation within tourism organisations, and as such an inseparable part of production processes, decision making and tourism policies.

To ensure a sustainable success, one has to take into account past and current developments and trends such as:
• Which general trends can be realised on the current major source markets regarding consumer behaviour, consumer requirements, application of new technologies as well as emerging new competitors.
• From where do tourists come, what kind of tourism do they prefer, how do they travel and how did the different market segments develop during the last years.
• Which source markets should be tackled in the future, how is the situation on these markets in a comprehensive sense (consumer, competition, position of the Bucovina).
• Which potentials exist for the further development of the Bucovina tourism product and which market segments can be serviced best with the national and the Bucovina tourism offer.

However as marketing begins at home internal marketing activities have to be undertaken. To be effective, necessary measures can only be defined if the feelings, opinions and expectations of the different target groups are known. To create the basis for internal marketing measures, basic research activities have to be carried out. Among others, the current weaknesses in the cooperation of the private sector and in public private partnership have to be identified.

Consequently market intelligence & knowledge management have to cover the situation as described in the destination in order to remove obstacles on the way to a sustainable tourism development as well as the situation on identified source markets including competitors on these markets.

2.3.4. Product Policy

Product policy can be seen under many aspects. In order to underline the need of cooperation on the private sector – though the suppliers on each level of the tourism value chain (see figure 8) are competitors, some examples are represented below:

Sustainable Tourism

The UNWTO sustainable tourism concept emphasis the balance between environmental, social and economic aspects of tourism, the need to implement sustainability principles in all segments of tourism, and it refers to the millennium development goals, especially poverty alleviation. To ensure long-term sustainability, there are the following rules, which should be observed according to UNWTO.

• Make optimal use of environmental resources that constitute the key element in tourism development, maintaining essential ecological processes and helping to conserve national heritage and biodiversity.
• Respect the socio-cultural authenticity of host communities, conserve their built and living heritage and traditional values, and contribute to inter-cultural understanding and tolerance.
• Ensure viable long-term economic operations, providing socio-economic benefits to all stakeholders.

Sustainable tourism development requires the informed participation of all relevant stakeholders as well as strong political leadership to ensure wide participation and consensus building. This shows the necessity to establish an effective internal marketing.
Achieving sustainable tourism is a continuous process and it requires constant monitoring of impacts, introducing the necessary preventive and/or corrective measures whenever necessary.

Sustainable tourism should also maintain a high level of tourist satisfaction and ensure a meaningful experience to the tourists. Raising their awareness about sustainability issues and promoting sustainable tourism practices amongst them.

Criteria for a Competitive Tourism Offer

A key to success is how a potential tourist perceives personally a destination for his vacation. This perception, which can be far away from reality, creates the basis for communication activities. This shows how important it is to know the situation on source markets and above all the perception of the destination on these markets.

The value/effort ratio of a tourism experience (see figure 8) is defined first by the diversity and quality of services, the ambience/atmosphere as well as experiences and relations generating the value of a tourism experience.

Secondly, it is defined by the cost of the tourism product/services, payment modes (cash/credit card acceptance) inconveniences on entering the country or poor accessibility of sites, bad road conditions, poor signs at roads as well as insecurities because of language problems determine the efforts in the above formula. The higher the value and the lower the efforts, the better the experience of tourists and the better the competitive position.

The single components of the tourism product and how they contribute to the value of the tourism experience is shown in figure 15.

The tourism product is the symbiosis on the one side of people, creating the environment in which tourism takes place, and people rendering the services on the tourism sector. On the other side there is the tourism infrastructure as described in figure 7 (Tourism value chain). The population and its attitude towards tourists, as well as the employees in the tourism sector generate with their competence and friendliness the well feeling of tourists.
tourism infrastructure comprising natural resources, cultural heritage sites and the enterprises on the tourism sector determine the diversity and the quality of the tourism product.

The description e.g. of cultural or historical sites are important components of the tourism product. Without appropriate tourist information, such tourism attractions / products cannot be experienced to the same degree by tourists as if there is no adequate information available, in the form of signage, leaflets, or other.

The best tourism product is of any value if it is not in harmony with the other three marketing mix components price, communication, and distribution policy, which are the next success factors to look at in more detail.

2.3.5. Price Policy

Consumer trends and the increasing competition in the tourism industry show that price policy is a sensitive issue. As major contributor to efforts in the value / effort ratio of a tourism experience (see figure 8), the price of the tourism product is a dominant success factor.

Prices depend largely on the basic prices of the single product components, on the fiscal framework influencing the calculation scheme as well as on the price policy taking into account the competitive position.

2.3.6. Communication / Promotion Policy

A comprehensive marketing strategy does not only cover external communication directed at potential domestic, intra-regional and international travellers plus the travel industry in source markets, but also internal communication directed at all parts of administration, at the business sector and finally at the local population. A general consensus regarding tourism and the support of the tourism industry leads to highly attractive tourism products and content for tourists visiting the country.

Internal Communication / Marketing

We have learnt above that a sustainable tourism development requires the informed participation of all relevant stakeholders. Therefore internal marketing measures are directed towards very diverse target groups such as the private sector tourism industry, the public sector tourism administration, politicians, cultural institutions, tourism sites, government organizations and finally people as employees in the public and in the private sector, as well as the local population. This requires a segmentation to be able to address stakeholders in more homogenous groups on their field of activity.

External Communication / Promotion

The external communication policy covers issues such as

- tourist offices / tourist information centres,
- print versus electronic media,
- trade fairs / seminars for the travel industry of source markets,
- workshops,
- tours for selected journalists, etc.

Modern communication strategies for tourism destinations focus mainly on two areas. Firstly, communication strategies focus on establishing and managing the image of the brand of the destination, and secondly, using best communication tools (such as print media, presentations, electronic marketing, etc.) with a restricted budget.

Building a brand for a destination is hugely important for marketing success. The brand is not just the logo, it is the combination of thoughts, feelings and expectations people have about visiting the destination.

The destination brand needs not only to be created and promoted but also protected. Once a brand loses its good reputation by delivering less than was promised, it is very difficult if not impossible to regain a good reputation.

As electronic media become more and more important as communication tools, a destination e-platform has become indispensable. The convergence of media such as telephone, TV, video, DVD’s, mobile end appliances, internet, etc. offers new opportunities to reach selected target groups in a more effective way. Web 2.0 means tourists share their experiences and ratings in the public domain, but also that destinations can contribute to debates or uncertainties on web-platforms.

An important tool for addressing the tourism industry of source markets and the public at the same time is trade fair participation. Key international trade fairs in Western Europe are WTM (London), FITUR (Madrid), BIT (Milan), and ITB (Berlin).

The responsibility for international trade fair participation on national level has the Ministry in charge of tourism, resp. the national tourism organisation. The role of the private sector is to ensure appropriate participation and contributions of the industry. Trade fair participation should be handled in the spirit of a Public Private Partnership. Both sectors are responsible for ensuring high quality in the overall appearance of the destination at trade fairs. In the Bucovina the Bucovina Tourism Association could be the adequate PPP institution to coordinate fair participation on a regional level.

The main principle of media relations within a destination is to maintain a consistent message on all levels of communication. This consistency also includes the brand of the destination. A repeated, consistent message builds brand equity over time.

Although electronic media is gaining importance, print media nevertheless remain a vital communications tool. Again, the preparation of the material must be consistent with the established brand.

The public sector is responsible for producing print material with tourism information about the destination at all levels, i.e. national, regional and local. The institution to carry out the duties in the Bucovina is the tourism division of the county. The role of the private sector is to provide necessary data about the tourism offer.

2.3.7. Distribution / Sales Policy

Distribution policy covers the traditional distribution channels via tour operators / wholesalers; travel agencies / retailers (see figure 10); print media; consumer fairs in major source markets, etc. Sales have focussed strongly on electronic distribution channels which have become more and more dominant and will become more important. Traditional distribution channels such as travel agents and TOs are also adopting these new channels, e.g. TOs offering their group tours online.
Distribution covers the presentation of the tourism offer, the reservation, invoicing, accounts receivable and all necessary interaction with the client. As a single provider cannot handle all these activities on his own on all selected source markets, it is necessary to cooperate with competent and reliable partners such as tour operators. This is especially the case if they are specialised on selected products and when travellers are still lacking the confidence in new or unknown destinations. Travellers then prefer to deal with local travel agencies in the source market and tend to use tour operators with good reputations in their own country for information and bookings.

2.3.8. Marketing Mix Summary

The responsibilities for the development and implementation of a comprehensive destination marketing strategy are shown in figure 16. The public sector is responsible for the marketing of the destination and the private sector is responsible for contributing appropriate products to be integrated into the overall marketing strategy as well as for the distribution and sales of the tourism products. Figure 16 shows that PPP is an indispensible prerequisite for success on the tourism sector.

As marketing mix policies are vital success factors, marketing is an important issue for all institutions on the public and the private sector as well as for the joint PPP institutions.

2.4. Success Factor Tourism Institutions (Management)

There are a great number of units in the legislative bodies, in the government, as well as in county and local administrations involved in issues affecting the tourism industry. At the same time, there are a great number of companies (SMEs) on all levels of the tourism value chain (see figure 8) creating the tourism product and servicing guests.
A successful tourism development depends on favourable framework conditions for the industry. These should be created by the public sector based on proposals and contributions from the private sector. The results are competitive tourism products and services.
Advocating / Lobbying – a Vital Activity
Changes in the legal framework, among others for the business sectors, are prepared by the responsible ministries. Before becoming law, bills have to be approved by parliament on the national level or by the county council.

Officers in ministries are in general experts in legal and administrative realms, but not on specific tourism issues. Therefore they must communicate with insiders of the tourism industry when tourism-related issues arise or when bills which are relevant to the tourism industry are discussed in parliament.

As the ministries, parliament and other regional and local public sector institutions are not able to communicate with hundreds of SMEs, the business sectors have to organize themselves on national, regional and local levels in order to define their needs and positions and to make these known to the public sector institutions. These lobbying activities in favour of a business sector are a vital part of a democratic system. To be effective, it requires appropriate institutions in the public and the private sector and their cooperation through PPP institutions.

Basic Relationships
The environment in which the public and private sector tourism institutions operate is illustrated in figure 17. This environment is comprised of the parliament, the government / administration, the tourism industry on a national and international level, regions and municipalities, governmental and non-governmental organizations, the public, the media and, finally, the political, economic, social, technical and ecological spheres.

All elements of the tourism environment generate needs, expectations and other issues which need to be addressed by tourism sector institutions. In order to achieve an effective public / private partnership, all stakeholders must be aware of the importance of the tourism industry for the country and the roles and responsibilities they assume.

The institutions of the tourism industry have to meet the requirements and expectations of other institutions and must use their influence and resources to ensure favourable framework conditions needed for the development of the tourism sector. To be able to do so, institutions have to have key competences, they need effective structures and they have to follow their defined principles. In setting up the requested institutions, the environment described in figure 16 can be seen as criteria to check whether vital relationships are adequately built.

2.4.1. Public Sector

Public sector institutions exist on all levels with an administration. On the national level there are the government with all ministries, parliament as the legislative institution, and government organisations such as the national tourism organisation (NTO) reporting to the ministry of tourism. As most institutions impact with their activities the tourism sector a permanent horizontal coordination is necessary in order to avoid contra productive measures. Besides a permanent monitoring of what is going on with relevance for tourism in the government as well as in parliament by the ministry of tourism, an inter-ministerial tourism council would help to ensure the horizontal coordination on the national level. On the other hand one has to acknowledge that nearly all ministries have a direct or an indirect influence on tourism with their decisions and measures. This means that the cabinet headed by the prime minister is in a certain sense the “inter-ministerial tourism council” as shown in figure 18.

Below the national level we have tourism regions as e.g. Banat, including two and a half counties, 42 counties and on the local level, per county a greater number of municipalities and communities. As all business is local the specific needs of the tourism sector on the way to achieving a sustainable tourism development have to be identified on the local level and then via the single levels, as shown in figure 18, be forwarded to the institution responsible for solutions.

The question is which institutions exist on the shown levels which are able to meet their responsibilities to ensure the best possible framework conditions for the tourism sector. In the Bucovina exists the tourism department in the Suceava County with a staff of five persons. They also cover the functions of the tourism information centre.
On the local level (municipalities and communities) there are no identified members of the administration responsible for tourism. However there is a number of mayors, which is aware of the tourism potential in their regions and which takes respective actions.

2.4.2. Private Sector

The elaborations on the horizontal as well as on the vertical coordination needs on the public sector count in the same way for the private sector (see figure 21).

The private sector of the tourism industry consists of the sub-sectors shown in figure 19. In large destinations where each of these sub-sectors includes hundreds of enterprises each, it makes sense to found sector associations for each of them. This enables the specific needs and issues of each sub-sector to be addressed and solved. Coordination and cooperation between these sector associations is a must, as the tourism product includes elements from a range of enterprises represented by the sector associations. In other words, they all contribute to an attractive tourism offer and must have a common interest in maintaining set quality standards and in a successful promotion by the national tourism organisation (NTO).

Apart from the tourism sectors above, there are more good reasons to found private sector tourism associations. Enterprises from different sub-sectors above but all situated in the same tourism region have specific common interests such as joint product development or marketing issues. Depending on the member potential, it makes in this case sense to join together in a local or a regional association which is then partner of the regional tourism administration.

Product lines which have specific rules and requirements can be a third group of characteristics of tourism-related enterprises which pool resources in an association

Figure 20 gives an overview about the possible combinations of sectors, types of tourism and geographical criteria which can lead to private sector associations. Examples for product lines are adventure, culture, health, business tourism, among others, MICE (meetings and incentives) tourism, agro tourism, etc.

Independent from the focus of the single association they all have to create the prerequisites which enable their members – SMEs – to achieve a sustainable tourism development. This requires services and advocating activities as shown in figure 21. As most associations suffer from a lack of financial resources, competence and capacity it makes sense to pool the limited resources in order to establish a strong and professional umbrella association which is able to enable its member associations to render needed services to their members (SMEs). Figure 20 illustrates how the umbrella association hovers above the national level associations representing the different sectors, types of tourism or destinations of the tourism industry.

!Private Sector Tourism Institutions

As all business is local, vertical coordination and cooperation to the regional, county and local representations are vital. Otherwise, the concentrated power of the tourism industry cannot be used effectively to convey and enforce the interests of those at the respective level. An umbrella association of the private sector associations can ensure that the ideas and needs of the private sector are taken into account by the NTO and other public sector institutions.

To be able to render expected services to members, to lobby on behalf of the sector (see figure 21), and finally to be recognized as a professional tourism association, various criteria and requirements should be met, such as

- representing a legitimate tourism sector,
- organized as a legally registered non-profit organization within its own jurisdiction,
- audited annually by a certified public accountant (CPA),
- including by-laws covering the basic points.

2.4.3. Public Private Partnership

The competitiveness of a tourism experience depends on a close cooperation of all stakeholders in a destination. Fields of cooperation and who is responsible for what can be seen at the examples given in figures 22, 23, 24. They prove that PPP is indispensible.
In marketing the public sector is responsible for a great deal of aspects of product and price policy concerning tourism products as it must ensure suitable infrastructure or legal framework conditions, etc. While the private sector companies involved in tourism itself must deliver marketable products and services, they are still dependent on the public sector set framework conditions. Associations pool in this context the marketing competence and capacities of the private sector, define the identified needs, and submit respective requirements to the administration.
The goals, targets and benefits of tourism for a society can only be realized if the stakeholders from within the public sector (government / administration / regional and local administration) and the private sector (accommodation / transportation / agencies / site management / handicraft etc.) join their creative resources and efforts in respective PPP institutions, coordinate their activities, and cooperate on single issues.

PPP has to take place on all levels and requires therefore on all levels units which are able to meet the PPP responsibilities such as the horizontal and vertical coordination and cooperation as shown in figure 27.
A national tourism board or council (see figure 25) must be seen as a focal point and highest decision-making body within institutional structures. This board has to be a PPP unit, composed by representatives from the public and private sectors. Such PPP units are also needed on the regional, district and local levels.

It is subject to the fact finding within the strategy development process to identify the current status of tourism institutions in the Bucovina and to define actions in order to get the necessary institutional frame for an effective PPP established.

2.4.4. Development Levels of Tourism Institutions

Depending on the number of potential members the needed institutions on the local and on the county level can have different degrees of organisation

Informal Group

Loose grouping of people pursuing common goals

Strengths:
- Small investment outlay,
- Interested people get together,
- Initial step to define common objectives
- Possibility to coordinate activities,
- Tourism gets an identified speaker,

Weaknesses
- Poor cohesion,
- Vaguely defined objectives and strategies
- No sustainable financial basis,
- Degree of organisation depends on needs and the will of stakeholders
Formalised Groups

Grouping of people on a formalised basis.

Strengths:
- Small investment outlay,
- Stronger cohesion,
- Defined objectives,
- Learning about group dynamics systematically.

Weaknesses:
- Weak financial basis,
- Fields of activities restricted due to shortage of funds,
- No commercial activities and thus limited reach and influence.

Association

Formal grouping of people on professional basis with registered statute

Strengths:
- Clear aim on commercial activities for the benefit of members,
- Clear objectives and activity planning,
- Tight cohesion,
- Clear structure and responsibilities.

Weaknesses / Risks:
- Competence and capacity of management
- Competence, capacity, commitment of mandate holders
- Participation and contribution of members,
- Lack of Acknowledgement

If it is not feasible to establish an informal “Round Table” of the tourism SMEs, the SMEs willing to participate and to commit have the following options (see figure 26)
- To establish on county level a private tourism sector umbrella association covering all sectors, types of tourism
- To establish together with the local tourism administration a local PPP Round Table, which has the function of the local tourism council
- To join the Bucovina Tourism Association the PPP unit on county level

2.5. Issues for the Bucovina Tourism Strategy

These issues are contained in the SWOT analysis in 8.7 Summary Outcome SWOT Analyses. That SWOT analysis is the basis for the identification and definition of needs.

- Sustainable tourism development requires the informed participation of all relevant stakeholders, an informed society is required. This is an internal marketing issue.
- There is a lack of tourism institutions which are able to render effective services to SMEs and to advocate favorable framework conditions. Possible solutions are presented in chapter 2.4. Success Factor Tourism Institutions.
• Monitoring the situation in the tourism destinations of the Bucovina is a permanent issue in order to identify obstacles on the way to a sustainable tourism development, which have to be removed. Fact finding and respective internal marketing tools have to be applied to improve the situation if needed.

• Transparency is one prerequisite tourism institutions have to meet in order to get the confidence and trust of diverse member groups as well as of the public. This requires to follow defined principles and to apply internal marketing tools.

• Tourism information is one component of tourism product (see figure 15). In this context Tourism information centers (CIT) play an important role, above all for individual travelers. Are the CIT potentials used at its best? Is the private sector involved?

• Monitoring of impacts, introducing the necessary preventive and / or corrective measures whenever necessary.

• Business sectors have to organize themselves on national, regional and local levels in order to define their needs and positions and to make these known to the public sector institutions.

• To be able to do so, institutions have to have key competences, they need effective structures and they have to follow their defined principles.
Part 2 (Theoretical Approach)
Building the Framework for the Bucovina Tourism Strategy

Whereas in part 1 we have created a common understanding of tourism, interdependencies, success factors, and tools, in part 2 we are now going to apply some of these tools. First we will look at the process, which will lead us to a further developed, updated tourism strategy. We describe the process and supply examples, which can be used as a guideline for the further development of the Bucovina Tourism Strategy in part 3.

3. Strategy Development Process

What happens in the frame of a strategy development process is shown in figure 27. Following the single steps which have to be undertaken will be elaborated.

Step 1 is to identify and describe the current status which serves as basis for the next steps.

Step 2 covers the definition or revision of the vision and mission statements as well as objectives and tasks for a set time period. In our example we have taken the five year period of the existing Bucovina tourism strategy which has set the goals shown below 2013 in figure 27.

!Influences on the way to 2013

Step 3 focuses on external influences which have an impact on the tourism development in the next five years. Some can’t be influenced others as e.g. the competitive position can.

Step 4 covers the internal influences deriving from the environment as well as from within the tourism sector in the destination. The question is which actions have to be undertaken to meet the set objectives for 2013 under consideration of the identified internal influences.
The outcome of steps 3 and 4 will be external and internal influences of relevance for the tourism development in the Bucovina. External and internal influences Bucovina tourism has to face are described in chapter 7 and 8. They have to be analysed to take the current status in Bucovina into account to identify strengths (what can be used for the further development), weaknesses (what needs to be improved), opportunities (what offers new possibilities) and threats (what needs to be considered and avoided to minimise risks). The result is a series of SWOT analyses that offer concrete points of departure for the deduction of necessary measures. SWOT analyses are done where the concrete status quo is analysed and the situation of relevant external and internal measures is considered.

How we get from SWOT analyses carried out in the frame of these two chapters via need assessments to identified projects will be shown in chapters 9 to 12.

3.1. Status of Tourism in the Destination

Step 1: The current status on the tourism sector of the destination has to be described and evaluated. This requires market intelligence, the evaluation of statistics, fact finding on the quality standards of the tourism offer and other activities which should create a clear picture of the current status which is the basis for the following steps. To give an example we have inserted figures of the Bucovina from 2008 in figure 27.

3.2. Vision – Mission – Objectives 2013

The vision statement should describe in more general terms what the destination wants to be in a given time. The vision of the Bucovina Tourism could be:

To be the internationally well known, leading destination for responsible tourism in Romania which keeps economic growth in balance with the need to preserve the natural and cultural heritage of the Bucovina.

The mission statement should express the way in which the vision should be achieved:

- To create by internal marketing activities an informed participation of all relevant stakeholders, an informed society, which is aware of the benefits of tourism and the responsibilities they have to ensure a sustainable tourism development,

Other issues to be covered by the mission statement could be:

- Education and further training of employees
- Services for SMEs, the backbone of the tourism industry
- Marketing strategy to position and promote the unique tourism offer on selected source markets in Romania and abroad in cooperation with NTO
- Interregional cooperation with neighbors counties.

Objectives express in more detail what should be achieved on which field when. We have to differentiate between more general qualitative and quantitative objectives. Following some qualitative objectives as example.
Objective 1: To ensure favourable framework conditions for the tourism business development

Tasks: Monitoring & Advocating
- Favourable framework conditions for all enterprises (SMEs) operating in the tourism sector calls for a monitoring on the national level of the government’s activities which might have a negative impact on the tourism sector of the county. Only then the county can intervene with the various ministries in order to prevent adverse effects.
- On the county level monitoring the activities of the county and the vertical coordination with the local level can contribute to favourable framework conditions for the revenue generating SMEs.
- Supporting the establishment of competent tourism institutions on the public and on the private sector as well as PPP units on the local and county level enables the identification of SME needs and to develop respective services.
- Another issue are illegal construction works and the illegal operation of tourism services, which lead to a distortion in competition and bear in case of an accident the risk to damage the image of the tourism sector when it gets a case for the media.

Objective 2: To implement private sector and PPP tourism institutions which are able to contribute to effective destination marketing?

Tasks: Institution building
A strong national and international competitive position can only be achieved if the private enterprises engaged in the individual sectors of the tourism industry play an active, competent role in tourism institutions on a national as well as regional and municipality level. This should be encouraged by the county, which calls for close cooperation between the SMEs of different sectors.

Should the private sector fail to meet its responsibilities in structuring the Bucovina tourism policy, it loses its right to criticise this policy. On the other hand the tourism sector will fail to establish favourable framework conditions for a sustainable tourism development and the sector will jointly fail to meet the vision and mission.

Objective 3: To ensure a high quality standard of the tourism offer

Tasks: Product quality assurance
The weakest link in the tourism supply chain of offers ultimately determines the image of the country. Therefore the tourism industry must engage in quality assurance right across all stakeholders. This entails the implementation of legal framework conditions, objective categorising in accordance with international standards and training institutions which can compete internationally in terms of content and technical equipment. The joint federation must engage in active quality assurance for Bucovina touristic offers.

The private sector is responsible for the quality of touristic offers which can be concretely booked. Furthermore, the Bucovina touristic product includes the infrastructure, which is influenced by regional development concepts, urban planning, the accessibility of tourist facilities etc. The county and the municipalities are responsible for this. All measures necessary to protect natural resources and the environment as well as to protect the local population and tourists such as protection from crime, health hazards, road safety are measures taken to ensure the quality of a touristic product. This is also the responsibility of the state.

Last but not least, public services such as information offices, visa regimes, passport and customs control are also part of the touristic offer.

Objective 4: To improve quality of human resources in management and on the ground.

Tasks: Training and further training

Product quality calls for well-trained personnel capable of supplying the necessary services. The state has the responsibility of providing basic training and further training facilities in the tourism sector. In the lack of private sector institutions on county level the county itself has the responsibility to take care that the training institutions and their courses should be in line with the latest developments.

Tourism enterprises are responsible for providing training positions and carrying out their own in-house training.

Objective 5: To achieve an increase in revenues of the companies of the private sector

Tasks: Marketing the products and services of the county

The county must develop methods to present the tourism offers of the region on the national and international markets. This can be achieved through print or electronic media. International marketing requires a close cooperation with the NTO.

To be effective on international source markets developments on the IT sector and possible applications of e.g. web 2.0 have to be monitored.

Objective 6: Improve business results for companies in the private sector, especially for SMEs

Tasks: Services for members

By pooling knowledge and calling in experts, an association can offer member services which will ultimately lead to higher profits. This can include improving operating efficiency, management, purchasing, controlling, etc.

However there are not such capable associations existing on the county level. This calls for an urgent solution. Possibilities are described in chapter 2.4.5 “Closing Gaps in the Tourism Institution Network”. See also figures 28 and 29 in this chapter.

3.3. External Influences

There is a wide range of impacts which cannot be directly influenced but which affect the development on tourism. Some examples can be found in “Influences on the way to 2013”.

- The geo-political environment with the neighbouring states of Ukraine and Moldavia open up possibilities for cooperation, e.g. round-trips enabling an inter-regional discovery of Bucovina.
• Environmental issues, climate change, security issues and health risks have influenced the global tourism industry strongly. How such issues are managed can form the image of a destination.

• Technological and also economic developments of the past years have influenced the tourism industry strongly. An example is the use of the internet as a major part of the touristic offer and also as a chance to communicate the products of a tourism destination globally. For business travellers, internet connection in the hotel room is an important part of the service of the hotel. The effects of the financial crisis on the tourism sector are, apart from the fact that demand has changed / receded, not yet foreseeable. Destinations which have invested heavily in new resorts and infrastructure in the past 10 years (e.g. Dubai or the Red Sea in Egypt) suffer from the downturn in tourist numbers and are in danger of collapsing.

• Demand for tourism offers of a destination are influenced by trends in source markets. In the case of Bucovina, that is over 80% Romanians that are travelling within the country. With a certain delay, trends from Western markets also filter through to the Romanian traveller. Thus, it is important to know how customer demands and behaviour change over time and how the tourism offer still meets those needs or whether it needs to be adapted.

• Each destination is in competition to other destinations. The competitive position is dependent on how well the destination can meet the demands of the targeted market segment in comparison to other destinations.

3.4. Internal Influences

How we can see in figure 27, there are also a number of internal influences on tourism. Internal means that the influences can be modeled and steered from inside the system.

• The influence for example of the political environment on the image of Romania internationally could impact on international demand. Seen from the national level, the regional political environment can be influenced.

• Concerning the political environment, it is for example interesting to see how national politics impacts on the image of Romania abroad and thus also on demand for tourism to Romania. Even easier to influence than the national political environment is the one at regional or county level. An example is the cooperation between the county council and the cities of the Bucovina and the cooperation of the destinations within the Bucovina.

• In 2.5 Issues for the Bucovina Tourism Strategy, we discuss in detail which options for influencing (as in the marketing policies) there are and that the development of marketing strategies requires market research and knowledge of trends, etc.

• Another success factor which is also dependent on internal design are the tourism institutions. Without tourism institutions on the private and public sector and good cooperation between them, sustainable marketing strategies are not feasible. Which tourism institutions are necessary for sustainable tourism policy and which responsibilities and duties they have is explained in 2.4 Success Factor Tourism Institutions (Management).
3.5. Issues for the Bucovina Tourism Strategy

- Revision of the mission, vision, objectives and tasks of the current tourism strategy in the sense of the benchmark given in the chapter 3.2 Vision – Mission – Objectives 2013.
- Evaluation of the existing studies on domestic and international source markets available at the Ministry of tourism.
- Identification of competitive destinations within Bucovina and on the international market and evaluation of status quo and trends on these competition markets.
- Further development of the identified types of tourism in the Bucovina in close cooperation with the local tourism stakeholders.
- Further development of the communication policy using the latest communication and sales channels in coordination at regional and at national level.
- Development of popular tourism offers creating favourable framework conditions for suppliers and incoming agents.
- Institution building (public/private/PPP) at the local, municipal, county and national level ensuring horizontal and vertical coordination and integration.

4. Identification & Definition of Tourism Strategy Components

In this section, topics (components) that need to be considered in the frame of a tourism strategy are presented. The following topics can be seen as a checklist for the development of a tourism strategy. In general, the following components are of importance:

1. destinations within the Bucovina
2. types of tourism
3. components of the tourism offer
4. fields of activities / measures
5. benchmark criteria.

The first three components are not included in this chapter but in chapter 8 “Internal Influences” in order to avoid repetitions. These points are only mentioned here as components.

4.1. Destinations within the Bucovina

Those destinations within the Bucovina which were identified in the tourism strategy are shown in Figure 28.

The Bucovina as a destination and the tourism destinations within the region are introduced in chapter 8.4. and in chapter 8.5.
4.2. Types of Tourism

During the development of the existing tourism strategy, several types of tourism which fit to the tourism potential of the Bucovina best, were isolated and form a focus of the strategy. These types of tourism are introduced in more detail in chapter 8.5.

4.3. Components of the Tourism Offer

The touristic offer of a destination consists of many components. These are treated in more detail in chapter 8.6. These components form the touristic offer which is then used to enable the types of tourism that have been identified.

4.4. Beneficiaries of Tourism Strategy

The beneficiaries of a sustainable tourism development can be seen in Figure 3. They are the private sector, the public sector and, last but not least, the local population. It is important to remember that tourism development such as that defined in the tourism strategy does not only have one beneficiary, but those three mentioned. This is important when coordinating the different stakeholders to achieve sustainable tourism development. The definition of single projects should therefore also contain the expected impact on the beneficiaries.

4.4.1. Private Sector

Not only the private sector, that is involved directly in the tourism sector, but also supporting sectors, service providers and others profit from sustainable tourism development. This means the tourism industry causes a ripple effect which is depicted in Figure 5, a fact that needs to be kept in mind when deciding on investments into the tourism sector.

4.4.2. Public Sector

Increasing tourism revenues means increased tax revenues for the public sector. Tourism also creates employment (thus decreasing the load of social costs of the state). Furthermore, tourism is an export and so can decrease a trade deficit. Examples show that the initial costs of state investments in tourism are more than outweighed by the benefits through increased revenues and incomes. These relationships need to be considered when developing the tourism strategy which includes measures to achieve future results.

4.4.3. Local Population

Everything that is beneficial for tourists is also positive for the local population. Examples can be improved infrastructure, the accessibility of tourism destinations or attractions, a cleaner environment, improved entertainment offers, etc. but most importantly higher employment and so increased incomes for the households, in general an increased quality of life. It is important to make these benefits clear to the local population. This leads to support of necessary measures from their side and a generally positive attitude towards visitors.

4.5. Fields of Activities / Measures

The following fields of activities have evolved from the development of the current tourism strategy for the Bucovina. They are based on programs for funding activities on the respective fields.

- Infrastructure for Tourism
- Rehabilitation & Preservation of historical sites
- Preservation of Authenticity
- Branding & Promotion

These fields of activities do not include the topics “Human Resource Development” and “Public – Private – Cooperation(Partnership)” which are basic requirements for sustainable tourism development. We acknowledge that the source of funding of tourism development projects is of great importance. Fact sheets of single projects therefore should contain the source of funding or the potential sources of funding when we talk about new product ideas or project recommendations. The allocation of single projects to sources of funding can be done as elaborated in attachment 15 “Project Management Tools”

We therefore recommend to structure tourism projects in an operational plan according to the fields of activities elaborated below. These fields should be elaborated and defined in more detail by the responsible stakeholders as part of the updating and completion of the more comprehensive tourism strategy.

4.5.1. General Conditions

General Conditions cover issues such as the tourism institutions on the public as well as on the private sector and their cooperation (PPP), the acknowledgement of tourism as a priority business sector, the existence of a tourism strategy, legal framework including conditions for investors, which are needed for improvements of infrastructure (roads, airports etc.).

4.5.2. Product Policy

Subjects of product policy are among others: General infrastructure (transportation / roads / railways / airports / waste management / energy / etc.), tourism infrastructure (tourism assets such as nature and UNESCO cultural sights / accommodation / restaurants / transportation / signposting / infrastructure for the different types of tourism), the rehabilitation & preservation of historical sites, the preservation of authenticity, tourist information offices etc.
In our proposal the topics infrastructure, rehabilitation of historical sites and preservation of authenticity are part of “product policy”. More details regarding the components of a tourism product are contained in Figure 15 and chapter 2.3.4 “Product Policy”.

4.5.3. Destination Marketing

Destination Marketing covers all tools and measures to promote the destination Bucovina in Romania and abroad e.g. branding / communication / promotion (web portal / brochures / folders / fair participation / info tours for journalists and business partners / etc.), distribution policy (TO / incoming agents / web portal with reservation functionality / tourism information centre / fair participation).

To be effective market intelligence / research is needed which has to supply information about consumer trends on targeted source markets on destinations which are in competitions with the Bucovina.

4.5.4. Internal Marketing

As sustainable tourism development requires the informed participation of all relevant stakeholders we have added the field of activity “Internal Marketing”.

Internal Marketing is vital for tourism awareness and understanding creation in the public, in the public administration and within the tourism business sector.

Local Population awareness leads to positive attitudes, hospitality orientation as well as improved services of the staff on the tourism and the public sector.

4.5.5. Human Resource Development

Sustainable tourism development requires well trained employees. The GTZ submits a proposal for the founding of a tourism school in Suceava. The concept is enclosed as attachment 21 to this study (see chapter 9.5 and chapter 12. Recommended Projects).

4.5.6. Public – Private Cooperation

As we have seen in chapter 2.4, PPP is another success factor for achieving a sustainable tourism strategy besides marketing. Looking at the current status of tourism institutions in the Bucovina and in Romania in general, the urgent need for action on this field becomes obvious. We therefore recommend establishing a single field of action “public – private cooperation” and a project “tourism institution building” (see chapter 12).

4.6. Benchmark Criteria

The most important basis for a tourism strategy is a variety of benchmarks of different aspects of the market. The development of a tourism strategy includes the analysis of the status quo, identification of potentials, formulation of aims and, under consideration of internal and external influences, the development of measures whose implementation finally leads to a fulfillment of the aims included in the strategy.

In order for the most important aspects to be considered and for the basic required standards to be met, benchmark studies are indispensable. They depict what aspects need to be considered and which standards (taking competitive destinations or consumer trends into consideration) need to be met. This is relevant for the marketing mix policies (see chapter
2.3 Success Factor Marketing). Moreover, general conditions for sustainable tourism development also rely on benchmark studies.

There is also another reason why benchmark criteria are important for the development or amendment of tourism strategies. We must be aware that service providers in touristic regions which need to be developed further only have their own experiences and their own approach to systems and structures and so may lack the complete overview. To achieve a strong competitive position, it is important to know the behaviour of potential travellers and how it will change, how competitive destinations cope with that and which possibilities there are to expand the product on offer in the destination. Benchmark criteria should thus contribute to the design of competitive tourists offers which are also economically viable.
Part 3 (Practical Approach)
Further Development of the Bucovina Tourism Strategy

The existing tourism strategy of Suceava County follows the steps described in chapter 3. First the current status is presented followed by the status the county wants to reach in 2013. Under consideration of potential external and internal influences a number of measure were identified which are partially in the implementation phase, others are on the agenda for the upcoming years (see in part 4 chapter 10 and 11)

Following we restrict the description of the current status on the tourism sector of the Suceava county on the presentation which was held in May 2009 (see attachment 1). Regarding the structure of the strategy development process, we follow the steps shown in figure 27 “Tourism Strategy Development process”

5. Status 2008 and 2009 of Bucovina Tourism

Total number of tourists:

227,000 visitors – 2007
187,412 visitors – 2004

Number of Romanian / foreign tourists:

85% Romanian and 15% foreign visitors – 2007
77% Romanian and 23% foreign visitors – 2004

Average duration of stay

2.3 days – 2007
2.5 days – 2004

5.2. Key Issues of Tourism Strategy Development in Suceava County

The issues below which were presented in May 2009 as part of the tourism strategy of Suceava show that there is a focus on legal framework conditions, human resource development, product development and communication and promotion of the Bucovina.

5.3. Present Tourism Infrastructure

Suceava County has the natural frame and the natural resources needed for a sustainable touristic development
- 7 painted monasteries and churches which belong to UNESCO heritage and another 87 which belong to the national heritage
- 92 creation centres and craftsman shops where one keeps the specific traditions
- archaeological sites
- 14 museums and 4 memorial houses
- touristic resorts of local and national interest
- 22 national reservations
- 415 accommodation establishments with over 12 000 accommodation units in 2-4 star hotels and 2-5 ‘daisy’ boarding houses
- Identified 7 areas of development: Suceava, Rădăuţi, Gura Humorului, Fălticeni, Câmpulung, Vatra Dornei, Siret
One has made the multi-criterion analysis of the territory of Suceava County based on:
- the quality of the road infrastructure and utilities
- the state of the religious, historical and natural heritage
- the state of the existing accommodation structures
- the kind of the present tourism
- the kind of tourism with development potential

Results and further details are part of the existing tourism strategy for Suceava County.

6. Vision – Mission - Objectives 2013

   6.1. Where Does Suceava County Want to Be 2013
   - Increase of the number of tourists (from 227,000 tourists in 2008, to 330,000 tourists in 2013)
   - Increase of the average time of stay (from 2.2 days in 2008 to 3.5 days in 2013)
   - Improvement of the price-quality ratio for the tourism services, provided by County Suceava
   - Preservation of authenticity of traditions (pottery, weaving, eye painting, wooden and stonework sculpture, icon painting on wood and glass) and products, which are a particularity of this area

6.2. Vision / Mission Statements

For further development of the existing tourism strategy, we recommend an adaptation of the vision and mission statements included in chapter 3.2 Vision – Mission – Objectives 2013.

6.3. Objectives

In chapter 3.2 Vision – Mission – Objectives 2013, a variety of aims and measures are introduced which form the framework of successful tourism development. We recommend using this example to define aims using those of the current tourism strategy and adapting and developing them.

7. External Influences of Relevance for Bucovina

   7.1. General Influences

Here below, we present some selected trends which relate to Western societies and to Europe in particular. They are based on various analyses and assessments made by international tourism experts. This was valid before the economic and financial crisis of 2008-2009, it is uncertain to which extent these trends will continue in the future.

   7.1.1. Economic development:

The economic and financial crisis of 2008-2009 has had large and lingering impacts on the tourism industry in Europe. In general, the economic downturn has led to long-haul travel shifting to regional and domestic travel, which has an impact on international tourism in Romania.

Consequences for the tourism sector:
Both the public and private sector might need to rethink their target groups, may find new customers (tourists) and must try to adapt in order to hold repeat customers.

7.1.2. Technology:

Internet applications and their development have changed information and booking structures in tourism completely. The rising importance of tourism information and destination information via web portals as is seen by the phenomenon dubbed Web 2.0 means destinations and the involved organisations must adapt their behaviour and marketing. Web 2.0 means that tourists are now directly involved in classification and criticism procedures; personal accounts and remarks are no longer restricted to personal websites but really impact on the image and success of both tourism destinations and services, e.g. tripadvisor.com. Online reservation systems are handling ever greater portions of the travel market, although new destinations in mass markets tend to still be booked via traditional channels.

Another aspect of new developments in the IT sector is the use of electronic communication channels for internal and external marketing purposes.

Consequences for the tourism sector:
Depending on tourism strategies and target groups, Bucovina in cooperation with other tourism destinations and the NTO must become actively involved in improving online bookability and presentation (PPP).

Public opinion on user-based websites such as Trip advisor can and should be used, respected and can be influenced.

7.1.3. Legal Framework:

The private sector can only manoeuvre within the framework given by government. As specific examples for the tourism sector, the Romania Tourism Bill 2008 and the issue of double taxation impact on the industry and so on its success.

Consequences for the tourism sector:
- here again, PPPs must ensure ongoing communication between lawmakers and the private sector institutions involved or affected.
- The PPP organisations must keep in mind that even bills passed which don't have direct impacts on the tourism sector may impact on it via indirect links.

7.2. Consumer Trends on Relevant Source Markets

7.2.1. Demographics

The number of persons in older age categories will rapidly increase. The elderly will be healthier and will have higher disposable incomes than in the past. Many of them will enjoy early retirement schemes.

As a result, the number of more experienced elderly travellers will increase more than the development of tourism demand in general.
Consequences for the tourism sector:
- Increasing demand for quality, convenience and security; for easy transportation; for more relaxing entertainment facilities (e.g. golf courses etc.); and for one-person products.
- More demand in shoulder months.
- In marketing, less emphasis should be put on age and more on comfort.

7.2.3. Health
Health-consciousness will increase still further. Though that will not influence the volume of demand, it will certainly influence the decision-making with regard to destinations, and behaviour during holidays.

Consequences for the tourism sector:
- Destinations that are perceived as less healthy will be more quickly avoided than in the past.
- Demand for sun-holidays will continue to decrease.
- Active or activity holidays will increase in popularity, and demand for facilities that correspond to this type of holiday will increase.
- The demand for wellness products will increase, including spas and fitness centres.

7.2.4. Awareness and Education
The average level of education is increasing. This will result in holidaymaking in which arts, culture and history play a more prominent role, including more educational and spiritual holidaymaking. Also of growing importance are educational programmes, which allow people to improve their knowledge while on holiday.

Tourists are also increasingly looking for an experience or an opportunity to carry out a particular activity – rather than selecting a specific destination. This means that national tourist offices and destination management organisations will need to be much more creative in their marketing and promotions.

Consequences for the tourism sector:
- Increasing demand for special products among others spiritual experiences/pilgrimage.
- The more prominent inclusion of elements of arts, culture and history in package tours and self-organised holidays.
- The need for better and more creative communication of information.
- Demand for new destinations will increase.

7.2.5. Sustainability
Environmental consciousness will continue to increase. For tourism, this will result in more demand for sustainable destinations, in which nature and population will play an increasingly prominent role. In order to mitigate the costs for sustainability, the price will increasingly be passed on to the tourists themselves.

Consequences for the tourism sector:
- The regional component in destinations will increase in importance.
- Destination management policies need to be improved by more coherent and consistent planning.
• The preference for destinations will be more strongly connected to the support given by the local population to welcoming increasing numbers of visitors.
• Regions which have suffered from dense construction (particularly where this is not in keeping with the natural landscape) will increasingly be rejected as attractive destinations.
• Eco-tourism should not be confused with sustainable tourism.

7.2.6. Safety and Security
Acts of terrorism, regional wars, pollution and other crises have unfortunately become facts of daily life, and influence the need to feel safe and secure. In tourism, this results in an increased need for safety and security, and in tourists avoiding destinations that are perceived as unsafe.

Consequences for the tourism sector:
• The quality of water (in lakes and pools, but also of tap water) will gain more importance for the selection of the destination, along with increased demand for better protection of water quality.
• The more critical tourists will more quickly make claims if the product offered does not meet the expected standards.
• The costs for guaranteeing safety and security will increase rapidly.
• The industry should be better prepared to meet tourism demand more flexibly in periods of crisis.

7.2.7. Other external Influences
Consumer trends on targeted source markets as described above are one major force, influencing the tourism offer. Below are shown some other external influences which impact the tourism industry, see figure 10.

• One social aspect influencing the tourism offer via the perception of a tourism experience is the balance between tourists and the indigenous population. To achieve this balance, internal marketing is needed to create awareness and explain relations between influencing factors and benefits.
• The perception of security in a destination can be different from the real situation. Security issues include beside war, terrorist attacks and the political stability as well as diseases and natural disasters.

7.3. Evaluation of Trends in Western European Source Markets

7.3.1. Tour Operator Interviews June-August 2009
To get an idea of the perception of the destination Romania as well as of the Bucovina as destination in Romania about 20 German tour operators were interviewed. The procedure was as follows:
• Development of a questionnaire (attachment 5)
• In cooperation with the Romanian tourist office in Berlin identification of about 50 tour operators as target group for interviews.
• Mailing of the questionnaire to all selected tour operators with the expression of our wish to discuss the questions listed by phone
• Interviews by telephone in the timeframe June to August 2009
It was a challenge to get the right person at the phone. Some interviews lead to a broad discussion about tourism in Romania. Following the summarised outcome of the tour operator interviews.

Ranking of the Destination Romania

- In no tour operator destination ranking Romania was positioned among the top 10. Though some T.O. focus on East and South-East European countries and cover types of tourism which fit to the potential in Romania.
- In the ranking of Dr. Tigges / Gebeco, the number two study tour operator in Germany Romania takes a position between 13 – 15.
- Because of the minor role the destination Romania plays for most TOs it was not possible to get valid answers on destinations within Romania or types of tourism.

Trends in Consumer Behaviour

- Because of the economic crisis, long haul travel is down
- Domestic travel in Germany is growing, outbound travel to European destinations is down but less than expected.
- Travelling in small groups or individually is growing
- Wellness, health, culture and hiking tourism are growing
- The length of travel is declining. Currently 5-7 days.
- Short term travel decision & booking is growing, flexibility expected
- For TO with an excellent reputation such as Studiosus or Dr. Tigges, price is not a dominant criteria for the travel decision if the price / value ratio fits.

Destination Promotion Romania

- The Romania tourist offices in Berlin and Munich are rated 6 in the scale from 1 (poor) to 10 (excellent)
- The Romania presence at ITB (B2B), Stuttgart and Munich (B2C) are known and appreciated.
- There are no specific requirements regarding the promotion of the destination Romania. One big TO has complaint that counterparts do not know how TO function and that promotion support should be more than supplying photos.

Experiences with Romania

The following ratings are based on a scale from 1 (poor) to 10 (excellent)

- Image of the destination Romania 5
- Quality of services 6
- Quality of attractions 7
- Quality of Hotels 4
- Quality of transportation 4
- Quality German speaking Guides 5
- General price / value ratio 6

Because of the lack of Bucovina awareness a valid rating of the same positions in the Bucovina as well as a rating of the awareness of the types of tourism typical for the Bucovina was not possible. Most tour operators judged the Bucovina similarly to Romania simply... because they had no other information. The fact that this happens must be taken into account by stakeholders in the Bucovina.

Table 3. Competitive destinations in Europe per type of tourism

In table 3, countries are listed which offer types of tourism which can be considered competitors for the identified types of tourism in the Bucovina. For a detailed benchmark however competitor destinations within these countries would need to be identified. Only at cluster level is a competitor benchmarking useful.

For the elaboration of product development measures, it makes sense to look at neighbouring or other central European clusters and to analyse and even to get to know these by means of delegation trips. Surely, interesting best practice examples could be discovered but also surely some lessons on what not to do in order not to waste good opportunities for maintaining a good competitive position.

7.3.2. Tour Operator Expectations

Tour operators need professional and realistic offers and reliable support on the ground in order to sell the destination. Tour operators in the source markets are the most important sales channel, in particular for international tourists. It is thus important to meet the expectations these tour operators have of their partners within the destination, in this case within the Bucovina.

A good strategy within the frame of distribution / sales policy is the participation at tourism trade fairs in the respective source markets. Tourism trade fairs that cater specifically for business partners (B2B) like the ITB in Berlin or the RDA Workshop in Cologne are particularly relevant. To increase interest and trust from potential business partners, the incoming agents and also the tourism organisations responsible for the marketing of the destination must present themselves in a professional manner. This includes:

- A meaningful company profile of the agency including history, company website, association memberships, information on insurance and liability, details on employees and their background, how long they have been in the business, and, if possible, references.
• Elaborated round-trips with all relevant details including prices of the offer, in printed form.
• Tourism information covering the highlights of the roundtrip in printed form.
• Electronic information material with offered roundtrips and comprehensive tourism information.

Further details on trade fair participation and destination presentation are included in a briefing attached to this paper (attachment 6).

7.3.3. Evaluation Source Market Studies

In attachment 7, some general data on the perception of Romania as a tourism destination in some source markets and the expectations and behaviour of foreign tourists in Romania is presented.

Some important information was delivered by studies ordered by the Romanian tourism ministry and coordinated by Romanian tourism offices from within source markets, studies done by internationally recognised consulting companies such as IPK, KPMG, Horvath Consulting and others, between the years 2006 and 2009.

Attachment 7 is summarizing assumptions about: Germany, Austria, France, Spain, Italy, Netherlands, the UK and Hungary. Such input is very important in order to be aware of the expectations of foreign tourists coming to Romania and to Bucovina, and to adjust the tourism offer if necessary. The tourism products should be personalised and targeted to the final consumers. The example below is a graph depicting expectation of tourists from the UK.

In blue are the expectations of a holiday, and in red is the perception of Romania for each point, respectively.

The tourism offer of Romania and of Bucovina almost reaches the level of expectation for the components “culture”, “historic patrimony”, “peace and quiet”, “ski destination”, and “adventure in nature”. For other issues, major improvements are needed.

In order to adapt the tourism offer properly and to find the right selling and promotion channels, it is important to be aware about the motivation and profile of tourists coming from source markets.
The attached study offers for each country information concerning general facts about the source market and which destinations are visited besides the Bucovina, profile, reasons for travel, modes of transport, type of overnight accommodation at destination, travel purchases, average length of stay and travel, frequency, favourite seasons, average daily expenditure and holiday activities. That information should be further used by the stakeholders in planning the promotion tools and in decision making process in tourism promotion and distribution. The information can also be used in order to train the accommodation establishments on how they can adjust and adapt the offer according to the country of origin of the foreign tourists and their specific needs and expectations.

7.4. Outcome Customer Interviews in Bucovina

In order to get a better picture of the profile of tourists visiting the Bucovina, the GTZ in cooperation with Suceava county council developed a questionnaire that was used in interviews with 109 visitors in the summer of 2009 (attachment 9).

The structure of the applied interviews were: 73,4% to Romanians, 1,8% tourists from Republic of Moldavia and 5,4% from USA, UK, Austria, Germany and Italy. The identified source regions from Romania are Bucharest (11%), Cluj Napoca (5,5%), Iași (7,3%), Constanța (4,6%), Timișoara (5,5%), Suceava (3,7%), Bacău (3,7%), Brașov, Piatra Neamț și Satu Mare with 2,8% each.

The length of the stay in the Bucovina is between 1 and 5 days for 46% and between 6 and 10 days for 40,6% of tourists. The difference between the medium lengths of the stays of tourists in the Bucovina and the response to this question is due the fact that most of the responders were long-stayers. The rate of response from group tourists and transit tourists was very low.

The study shows that the percentage of repeat visitors is high: 69,7% of total. The motivations of tourists to visit Bucovina was: Leisure / Relaxation (56,9%), Experience nature (36,7%), Culture and the painted monasteries (19,3%), Discovering new traditions and customs (17,4%), Active tourism, Discovering cultural values, Local Gastronomy, each of those with a percentage of 13,8%. Then on the place 6 is following VRF – Visiting relatives and friends with 12,8%, Rural life 11,9%, Business tourism 11% and Health and health treatments with 6,4%.

The main information source that influenced the holiday-making decision were delivered by previous visits (38,5%), recommendations from friends and relatives (25,7%), internet (16,5%), Bucovina tourism guides (14,7%).

The main attractions of Bucovina are, according to the research, Nature (67%), Culture and traditions (38,5%) and on the third place is pilgrimage and the monasteries (36,7%).

The competitive destinations mentioned by the tourists are Maramures, Transilvania, Neamț Region and Danube Delta. Some other results of the study refer to the small destinations visited in Bucovina (Falticeni, Suceava, Raduți-Siret, Vatra Dornei, Humor, Campulung a.o.), booking instruments, accommodation booked, values associated with Bucovina, the overall satisfaction and recommendations for improvement.
7.5. Competitors of Bucovina Destinations

7.5.1. Destinations within the Bucovina

Above all in the source market Romania, there is competition between the destinations within the Bucovina which can become a driving force for the further development of the tourism offer of the single destinations. Internal competition can also be used to get the commitment and contribution of relevant stakeholders.

Table 4. Ranking top 3 destinations by type of tourism

Table 4 shows one ranking of the destinations within the Bucovina by type of tourism based on the situation in 2008/09 and one ranking based on the development potential. The figures were taken out of the strategy presentation from May 2008 (attachment 1). During our workshop in October 2009 in Campulung Moldovenesc it became obvious that the ranking in table 4 has to be revised.

7.5.2. Destinations within Romania

Here below is the matrix with the different types of tourism and those destinations within Romania which are competitors on these fields to the Bucovina as well as to the destinations in the Bucovina. For benchmark purposes it is recommended to identify these destinations within Romania and to add them in the top row of the matrix. This lies in the responsibility of the Tourism Group of the County to actualize this chart.
7.5.3. Destinations Outside of Romania

In Table 3 above, destinations within Europe which have been identified by the H&A tour operator interviews are listed. This list is merely a naming of destinations which needs to be elaborated upon to allow a more detailed comparison on tourism cluster level. For benchmark purposes and as best practice examples it would be good to identify tourism clusters in some of the countries which fit to single types of tourism identified in the Bucovina.

7.6. Summary Outcome External Influences

In the chapters above and in the attachments, important influences which will impact on future developments on the tourism sector in the Bucovina were listed. A whole range of strengths / weaknesses/ opportunities / threats that can be deducted from these influences have been used to develop new projects (see below in part 4).
The listed external influences cannot be completed, they do however highlight which issues can have an influence on tourism in the Bucovina and what needs to be monitored closely, considering the dynamic development of these issues in order to seize opportunities for the further development of the tourism strategy of the Bucovina.

8. Internal Influences

8.1. Political Environment

The legal framework in a destination can create poor or favourable framework conditions for the tourism development. Taxation schemes e.g. in Romania which lead to much higher charges of tourism activities than in competitive destinations are one example. For the development of destinations the investment climate depending e.g. on laws to secure investments, to handle profits are of great importance.

For the development of the tourism sector continuity in tourism institutions, their commitment in the sense of the tourism sector and contributions to the development are an important issue. Unfortunately there is at least at national level a lack of continuity.

Another obstacle for a sustainable tourism development is given if the county president and the mayor of the capital city belong to different parties.

8.2. Application Marketing Tools

The use of the marketing tools as introduced in Figure 14 should aim at achieving sustainable tourism development. This means having the best possible knowledge about consumer behaviour and trends on the important source markets and also knowledge on the development of the most important competitor destinations. As over 80% of the visitors to the Bucovina come from Romania, it is particularly important to know changes of Romanian consumer behaviour and to develop the tourism offer accordingly. As one aim is to increase international visitors, it is also important to have good knowledge of trends on the chosen international source markets.

In addition, a focused application of marketing tools also requires a profound knowledge of the competitor destinations both concerning regions and concerning types of tourism.

Which marketing instruments are to be used in which way can be seen in chapter 2.3 Success Factor Marketing. It is important to be aware that it is not sufficient to use external marketing measures to achieve increasing tourist numbers and revenues but also to use internal marketing for stakeholders and the local population to ensure the prerequisites for sustainable tourism development. Internal marketing measures are of importance in order to achieve a positive, pro-tourism attitude among the local population, the commitment and contribution of stakeholders and the customer-service orientation of the staff in the tourism sector.

8.3. Public – Private Sector Cooperation (PPP)

The development of effective marketing measures and their use can only be successful if appropriate institutions exist on the public and private sectors which are able to develop and apply these instruments. This requires respective competences and capacities of the responsible institutions. Furthermore, willingness on both sides to cooperate in PPP institutions and to take over respective responsibilities for the marketing of the destination are indispensable. Which institutions take the responsibility for which marketing measure can be seen in Figure 16.

8.3.1. Status of Tourism Institutions in the Bucovina

There is a lack of tourism institutions on a regional, district and local level, a lack of competence of persons in charge, a lack of continuity in politics, a lack of understanding the tourism sector and its needs, a lack of public private partnership and a lack of cooperation within the tourism sector.

Cooperation is particularly relevant to tourism, because it calls on the resources of many different companies to meet a client’s needs. Working together is essential, because no one service provider can single-handedly welcome clients and integrate the development of a tourism destination.

8.3.2. Tourism Institution Network

The position of the Bucovina tourism association in the national tourism institution network can be seen in Figure 26. As most national private tourism sector associations have no regional/county and local structure they have a problem to render needed services to its members (SMEs) operating on the local level. This problem can be solved by a cooperation with APTs such as the Bucovina tourism association.

In a bottom up approach APTs identify via their network on county level (see figure 31), the service needs and requirements of SMEs, pool these needs and requirements and submits them to FAPT, the umbrella association of APTs. FAPT pools, evaluates and structures the needs and requirements received by all APTs and submits them to the respective national association, representing tourism sectors or types of tourism (see Table 1) which have the competence to render required services but no local network to service their members.

!Sources for Competences and Capacities

The top down solutions are developed by public and private sector tourism institutions on the national level (see figure 30), and then via FAPT and coordinated and organised by the respective APT such as the Bucovina Tourism Association rendered to SMEs on the local level. The APTs and their local members do the field work to identify service needs and to organise the platform for solutions – thus supplying the missing regional and local network for national association’s services. This constellation (see Figure 30, 31) enables the local tourism institutions as well as the APTs to offer via their national partners services which meet identified SME needs. The outcome is a typical win – win situation which contributes to improved product quality and thus better competitiveness of Bucovina destinations.

8.4. Destinations within the Bucovina

The following destinations within the Bucovina were analysed in depth for the development of the tourism strategy presented in May 2009. Each destination and type of tourism can undergo a SWOT analysis on the basis of available data. It is recommended that certain destinations should undergo this procedure and to use these examples to develop a need assessment for the identification of necessary measures. An example for how to use the SWOT Analysis scheme is given in 8.7.1 “General Conditions”.

In order to get an overview of the Bucovina destinations as basis for benchmarking and further discussions, it is recommended to define further criteria for structuring the tourism potential as well as the current situation. Chapters 8.4.1. to 8.4.6. could then be completed.

On the basis of the information contained in the 2008/09 tourism strategy, the following criteria and more should be developed per type of tourism. This is an important step so that all stakeholders get a common understanding of the types of tourism when developing their own measures to improve their offers. In addition, this procedure enables better horizontal coordination of activities and measures among the destinations.

Taking into consideration the results of the types of tourism in the available tourism strategy and results from recent studies, SWOT analyses have been carried out for each type of tourism. They are combined in attachment 4. These SWOTs form the basis for the need assessment and so for the deduction of necessary measures to use the strengths, overcome weaknesses, seize opportunities and avert threats. See need assessment per type of tourism in attachments 10 to 11.

8.6. Components of the Tourism Offer

The different types of tourism cannot be described without the following components of the tourism offer. This means the quality of the touristic offer depends on the quality of each component. It is important to note that the weakest link in the product chain determines the quality of the whole product and offer. For example, bad service as a consequence of insufficient professional training can destroy the otherwise positive image of a destination. It is thus in the interest of all stakeholders and suppliers to ensure that the overall level of quality is high. This includes the areas which lie in the responsibility of the public sector. See also Figure 15.

The following two tables make clear that bad performance in one component of the tourism offer can damage the performance of a destination within the Bucovina or of a type of tourism in the Bucovina. Thus, all stakeholders within a destination and/or all stakeholders involved in one type of tourism must ensure that all elements of the tourism offer maintain a high level of quality. Quality assurance is thus a common duty, both of the public as well as of the private sector. This also makes clear how important it is to have institutions in both sectors which can work together efficiently to ensure a high level of quality.

On the basis of the analyses made for the existing tourism strategy, the listed components of the tourism offer can be broken down and defined in more detail. It is recommended to do this in order to achieve a common definition and structure for further development of the tourism offer. Furthermore, it is possible to do a SWOT analysis per destination within the Bucovina and per component of the tourism offer to discover needs for action for improvements of the tourism offer and to achieve the envisaged goals for 2013.

8.7. Summary Outcome SWOT Analyses

Detailed SWOT analyses can be found in attachments 4. Here below is an example of how to use the SWOT analysis scheme. The table shows the standard formula for SWOT analyses. The idea is to identify the strengths, weaknesses, opportunities and threats from the benchmark criteria in the left column. For the strengthening of the competitive position of the tourism destinations, identified strengths (above all in contrast to their competitor destinations) can be used, weaknesses can be overcome, opportunities can be seized and threats can be averted.

All SWOT analyses carried out during work on this study on the types of tourism as well as on the following fields of activities are combined in attachment 4.

8.7.1. General Conditions

Here is an example for a SWOT analysis outcome and deductions from it, for a general framework for the tourism organisations for the Bucovina.

already in implementation
- A good cooperation with the Chamber of Commerce and Industry in Suceava and with other important stakeholders in tourism
- Political willingness to use tourism potential.

their preservation / expectations of visitors / state of the art solutions etc.) Resume: Bucovina is still far away from an informed participation of stakeholders, which are requirements of a sustainable tourism development
- SMEs the backbone of the tourism sector as revenue generator is not aware of state of the solutions for the handling of their business. They are not able to identify their service needs
- Lack of competence and capacity on local and county level to compile and to offer services which help SMEs to apply state of the art solutions
- Priorities should be established in the tourism development at county level, in order to reach a clear vision of tourism for Bucovina Region
- Lack of entrepreneurial and management skills for the pension and hotel owners.
- The local authorities are not aware about their role as supporters of tourism sector (public areas, parks, public lighting). The tourism can not be developed without a proper public space and good public services (lightning, signposting, bus stops, local transportation, rest places for tourists and visitor centers or TICs).
- Contradictions concerning the definition and exploitation of protected regions; too soft sanctions for violating such laws; the fees for visiting parks are too low
- There are over-regulated segments and under or un-regulated segments, which generate an unbalanced aspect of the legislation.
- The industry did not address to county government with a unified voice in order to achieve better collaboration
- Need to professionalize the activity of tourism departments in planning and marketing field
- Lack of competent tourism experienced people on local administration in the 7 administrative regions of Bucovina; need of tourism training for the representatives of 7 tourism units within Bucovina, in order to participate to the Tourism Consultative Body at County Level

Business Plans and Architecture Plans are not aware by the specificity of tourism field. For this reason a lot of problem in management and operation of tourism structures are appearing.

8.7.4. Internal Marketing

The SWOT table listing the results of the SWOT analysis on internal marketing are contained in attachment 4 of this paper.

8.7.5. Human Resource Development

The quality of Human Resources in tourism is a key factor in tourism development. According to the Memorandum of Understanding, a close attention was given to this component. We will present hereby the strengths and weaknesses for the Human Resources Management Development in Bucovina and Romania, and in chapter 9.5. we will describe a corrective proposal, to create in Bucovina a Competence Centre for Tourism (See also attachment 21).

The current situation in education and further education can be described as follows:

- High density and variety of tourism faculties of in Romania: at least 27 listed tourism faculties
- Good graduates use internships and work & travel programmes abroad to leave Romania and go working abroad.
- Only (or mainly) theoretically based first professional education,
- Lack of practical experience orientation in first professional education (Lyzeum, college, professional schools/SAM and university)-
- Teachers, professors and trainers do not have (enough) practical and up-to-date experience and knowledge
- Content and curricula don’t fit requirements of the tourism labour market
- Mediated tourism knowledge is not up-to-date
- A lot of training facilities at professional schools were developed and modernised in the last 5 years, but even today there are not enough places / is not enough space in learning stations and of practical training facilities
- Lack of intercultural behaviour and green-thinking (environment protection)
- Lack of multi-language tourist guides and knowledge about Romania and the region.

Problems of jobholders and small businesses in tourism

- Lack of service orientation of employees and managers
- Lack of business and management skills of the middle and top management
- Family businesses do not have (enough) tourism knowledge, customer orientation, management and marketing skills
- Lack of active selling and internet marketing skills
- House-keeping and room-services should be improved
- Accommodation design, furnishing and interior equipment are not up-to-date and not convenient.
• Problem of part-time labor / seasonality / high rate of labor migration to Western Europe

8.7.6. Public Private Cooperation (PPP)

Figure 33 shows that beside the tour team of the county and the Bucovina tourism Association as PPP institution on county level, there are no other responsible tourism institutions on the private sector as well as on local level on all sectors existing. There is an urgent need to establish respective tourism institutions. Whereas the two existing institutions are a strength, their organisational structure, the available capacities, the possibilities to render services to SMEs etc. are weaknesses which require action (see chapter 9).

8.8. Strategic Positioning of the Destination Bucovina

Under consideration of the described external and internal influences on the development of the tourism sector, two strategic decisions must be made: Cluster strategies which give value to the client and market range strategies.

8.8.1. Strategies to Give Value to Clients

To give value to the clients of a destination, two alternative strategies can be chosen. Each poses different requirements and has different consequences. The first can be reversed while the second is almost impossible to reverse:

1. Differentiation strategy: The main value proposition lies in being exclusive, original and quality-oriented. This strategy is based on offering some of the most important value components (services, experiences and sensations) in a unique way.

2. Cost leadership strategy: Here, the main value proposition is enhanced by a high-value-for-less-effort formula. This strategy consists in producing lower-cost services, or services with fewer discomforts or insecurities, than one's competitors.

8.8.2. Market Range Strategies

For the evaluation of the range of markets to serve, another two strategic options should be considered. These can be combined with any one of the former two. Once again, these have very different requirements and consequences.

1. Global strategy: This means addressing all the tourism source markets from all geographical regions of the world.

2. Focused strategy: This consists in focusing on only one, or a reduced number of, segments. The perceived value of each chosen segment is enhanced. The strategy works simultaneously with either a differentiation or a leadership in costs strategy.

8.8.3. Recommendation

There is no doubt that the prerequisites given in the Bucovina and under consideration of the external influences, especially concerning customer behaviour and trends, only the "differentiation strategy" makes sense.

Concerning the market range strategy, only the focused strategy makes sense for the Bucovina. Romania and the Bucovina firstly don't have the resources to pursue a global strategy and secondly the capacities available do not allow for a global strategy.

9. Need for Action / Identified Measures

In Chapter 4 "Identification and Definition of Tourism Strategy Components" we were introduced to the destinations within the Bucovina as well as to the types of tourism (see 4.1 and 4.2.). In addition, we are now aware of the tourism product components ( see 4.3 and 8.6), the fields of activities / measures (see 4.5 and 8.7.) and of our recommendations in chapter 4.5. for the structuring of the fields of activities. In the following chapters, the identified measures will be positioned in a matrix. This gives us a transparent and structured overview of all identified measures – per identified field of activity, per type of tourism and per destination within the Bucovina.

In the following, we use the recommended structuring for the fields of activities independent of the source of funding. However, the source of funding will be identified in the project code which we will identify for each project, as discussed in chapter 4.5..

In part three "Further Development of the Bucovina Tourism Offer" with chapters 5 to 8, the current status of the tourism sector in the Bucovina is partially described. We recommend a completion of the descriptions and definitions of single chapters on the basis of the existing tourism strategy. Under consideration of the external and internal influences, SWOT analyses on the single components of the tourism strategy were carried out. Most of the SWOTs are attached. These SWOT analyses should also be completed. On this basis, need assessments can be carried out. For this purpose and in order to identify necessary measures and projects, we have developed the following table.

How to use the Need Assessment Scheme

In the attached need assessments, the outcome of the SWOT analyses were integrated into the second column of the need assessment scheme. In the third column ("actions needed"), actions to address the SWOTs were defined. In the column "projects", research was done to ascertain whether these SWOTs were already being addressed in current, planned or recommended projects. Finally, in the right hand column, "Field of activity" defines which kind of activity it requires.

On the basis of the available SWOT analyses (see attachments) and other, future SWOT analyses that are possible due to the dynamic further development of the tourism strategy, the described need assessments can be done for the following fields of activities. To clarify the methodological approach, this is done in an exemplary manner for the following cases.

9.3. Destination Marketing

9.5. Human Resource Development

Needs on this subject can be derived from the SWOT analyses in attachment 4. As there is a great need, attachment 21 is a proposal for a “tourism school” in Suceava by the GTZ.

9.6. Public Private Cooperation

We have already seen in 4.5.6. and 8.7.6. with figure 33, that there is an urgent need for completion of the tourism institutional framework. We therefore propose a project “Strengthening Tourism Institutions in the Bucovina” (see chapter 12.2.). Here bellow we identified some actions developed from the SWOT Analysis, presented as Need for Action / Identified Measures. All these can represent first operational plan for the development of tourism in Bucovina.

The activities presented here bellow are developed according to the general issues of programmatic documents\(^1\) and to the needs identified in the workshops organized by GTZ and County Council. The content of this chapter refers to the general framework of the development of tourism in Bucovina, Suceava County, are structured according to chapter 8 (Part I) and in individual Needs of Assessment (Part II), structured on different type of tourisms and presented in a table as Table 10 (Attachments Needs Of Analysis).

The both proposals for measures are developed starting by the results of workgroups from the seminars on 25\(^{th}\) of June and 4\(^{th}\) of October 2009. We will present here the identified corrective measures for the tourism development in a table format. The table is describing the objective of the proposed action, the action/measure, motivation, timeframe, partners, funding and project status (implemented, open, to be done), with the mention that project

Museums and heritage attractions are now required to entertain as well as educate. Better interpretation encourages visitors to linger and offers opportunities to increase visitor spend.

To develop museum and heritage attractions to provide best practice visitor interpretation and welcome facilities.

Museum staff should act as hosts rather than supervisors in order to improve visitor satisfaction. In Bucovina are already some best practices in Suceava Ethnographic Museum, Village Museum and in Gura Humorului. The attitude must be expanded to all structures, and if possible to the monasteries too.

Including additional language materials.
Identify opportunities and locations for improved catering and retail operations in or alongside museums and heritage attractions.

Part 4 (Recommendation for Monitoring Projects)
Action and Time Plan Bucovina Tourism Strategy

10 Ongoing Projects / Activities / Measures

We recommend setting up a fact sheet including a project code for each project. In order to achieve an overview, it makes sense to fit each project and its code into a matrix such as the one below (or one to be defined). For examples, please refer to Chapter 12 "Recommended Projects".

Table 12 offers an overview which types of tourism within the Bucovina or which destinations within the Bucovina are affected by current projects.

Table 12. Matrix ongoing projects per type of tourism and per destination

In addition, Table 13 shows in which fields of activity in the Bucovina as a whole or within a single destination projects are being done.
Table 13. Matrix ongoing projects per field of activity and per destination

We recommend compiling the fact sheets of current projects and assign the fields of activities and fill in the project codes into matrices such as above.

11 Projects in Preparation

In addition to those projects already planned, there is a row of projects which will help achieve the vision for 2013 which are still in a so-called project pipeline. For overview purposes, these pipeline projects are put into the matrices below. For examples, please refer to Chapter 12 “Recommended Projects”.

We recommend compiling the fact sheets of planned projects and assign the fields of activities and fill in the project codes into matrices such as above.

12 Projects Recommended as Result of Cooperation GTZ / Suceava County

Besides the ongoing and planned projects which will help the Bucovina reach the vision 2013, there is, as we have identified, still the need for a number of additional projects to meet challenges and to achieve a sustainable tourism development in the Bucovina. In order to ensure transparency and to enable a comparison of the projects, this report includes a fact-sheet per recommended project next to the respective matrix.

12.2 Internal Marketing Project

The fact sheet for the recommended project in the field of internal marketing is included in the attachments to this paper (see attachment 16).

12.3 Strengthening Tourism Institutions in the Bucovina

The fact sheet for the recommended project in the field of institution building is included in the attachments to this paper (see attachment 21).

12.4 Human Resource Development

The fact sheet for the recommended project in the field of human resource development is included in the attachments to this paper (see attachment 22).
12.5 Development and Implementation of a Project Management System

The fact sheet for the recommended project in the field of project management is included in the attachments to this paper (see attachment 23).
Part 5:
Final Remarks

The tasks associated with this project are outlined in attachment 3. In the course of the development of this strategy paper, the following points became clear:

1. A tourism strategy including many detailed studies was already available which needed an update.
2. The levels of understanding of the workings of the tourism sector are very varied among the stakeholders involved.
3. No-one is fully informed on all tourism relevant projects planned, in preparation or under way nor of the various funding channels available.
4. There is a lack of transparency and of monitoring systems due to a lack of necessary management tools.

The needs in connection with the above mentioned issues and the weaknesses in the current system became more and more clear in the course of the project and so this tourism strategy paper has become not only that but has been amended with a large selection of tools which have been designed to help the stakeholders involved to tackle the issues and overcome problems that are mentioned. These tools are included in the strategy paper or are attached (see for example attachment 10).

This guideline can be seen as a tool for
- improving the general understanding of the tourism sector,
- clarifying responsibilities,
- pointing out the importance of a sound tourism strategy,
- and, in attachment 17, a recommendation for increasing transparency.

Human resource development is an important issue for the Bucovina and a recommendation for the foundation of a tourism school is also attached (attachment 17).

H&A has taken this project a lot further than could be originally foreseen. This added value was due to some very involved and interested people who supported the work and went to great lengths to deliver data, information and ideas. H&A wishes to thank everybody involved in the development of this tourism strategy paper and for the excellent cooperation of all.
